Origins

Gregers Gryson joined the Oslo Police Department as a forensic computer analyst straight after finishing a MSc in Computer Science. At the end of 2002 he was assigned to assist the Trondheim police in the investigation of a rape homicide with satanic overtones. Whilst revisiting the crime scene alone, the biker gang responsible returned, and after beating him half to death, threw him into a river covered with ice.

Three months later, south of Tromso, a Royal Marine Commando training party came across his body whilst practising submergence survival. But rather than recovering a corpse, the stress of the attack caused Gryson to erupt and adapt in order to survive.

His ability to survive extreme conditions is however minor when compared with how the eruption has sharpened his mind. Gryson is one of the most intelligent people on the planet, with the ability to analyse vast amounts of data and draw accurate conclusions from disparate sources.

Realising the potential of such a person, the Norwegian government immediately recruited him with the help of NATO into the intelligence world, and even created a new rank for him – Warrant Brigadier General with Carte Blanche over all Nova affairs.

Regrettably, the authorities were so elated to have a nova actively co-operating with them, they ignored anything that may cast a shadow on their chosen one. The events surrounding Gryson's eruption have caused him to become mildly paranoid, megalomaniacal and exceptionally ruthless when his own safety is threatened. In addition to his intelligence being enhanced, his ability to manipulate people was also augmented, and in the last two years has effectively seized control of Norway and all Intelligence operations in NATO all without raising suspicions.

In fact the only area where he has minimal influence is ironically within ENA. ENA's EU origins have created a degree of prejudice against anyone with the suggestion of pro-american/anti-european integration attitudes. This is however being undermined by the fact that he regularly provides classified intelligence to ENA and regularly helps european police forces solve otherwise impossible crimes, in addition to ensuring that nova crimes remained covered up.

Publically Gryson is pretty much ignored by the international press, spending his time either lecturing in computer science at Tromso university, consulting with european police forces and governments and writing open source software for desktops at a rate that has microsoft having palpitations.
